

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

NOTES OF OTHER SOCIETIES

According to the New York Tribune of June 3 a number of prominent British scientists have organized a committee to found a School of Archaeology at Jerusalem. The members include Sir Frederick G. Kenyon, president of the British Academy, Sir George Adam Smith, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Prof. Herrmann Gollancz. Two gifts of $5,000 each have already been received. The School will devote itself to excavations and surveys and the workers will be drawn from all parts of the British Empire and the United States. The work heretofore done by the Palestine Exploration Fund will henceforth be conducted in coöperation with the new institution, and further funds for excavation will be made available from the funds of the British Academy.

The Executive Committee of the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem has placed its properties in Jerusalem at the disposal of the Red Cross and the offer has been accepted. Prof. Edward A. Wicher, of the San Francisco Seminary, a former student of the School, who is going to Palestine in Y. M. C. A. work, has been commissioned to act as the School's representative in Jerusalem. His address is care of American Y. M. C. A., Cairo, Egypt. Negotiations with the Palestine Exploration Fund have been opened looking towards closer coöperation.

PERSONALIA

PROF. A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON left for Persia on May 30, as a member of a commission sent by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief for humanitarian work in that country.

Dr. Stephen B. Luce, of the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania, has been appointed a lieutenant in the Navy and is now in service.

Prof. A. Carnoy, late of the University of Pennsylvania, has accepted a professorship in the University of California.